

One Small Step Inspirational Story

Doug and Tammy Renwick

My motivation is simple. She is 11, has the biggest smile, crazy red curls, loves to prank everyone, and fights every day the things PWS tries to do to her body. When she was born I could not accept the doc or the geneticist who said life with PWS would be bleak. Not saying it is easy by any means but my goal is to make her life as good as it can be and the way to do that is through research. One day we will figure out how to help with their anxiety, one day we will figure out how to stop the hunger, one day it will all make sense...but till then we help any way we can through raising money for research and even parent advocates for the research projects. Anything we do can help.

I mean every word!
